Prescott Gets an Armory

Our hat is off to Prescott for that city's achievement in wangling out of the authorities a brand new National Guard armory. It will house the guardsmen's equipment, will furnish an indoor drill ground 75 by 100 feet — and will be equally useful for the civilian purposes of Prescott. Hope has hollered loud and long for an armory, but as the years roll by Prescott gets the goods and Hope just keeps on hollering.

Hope Gets Set for El Dorado Game Friday

Jimmy Simms Returns for Practice After 3-Day Absence

Coaches Foy Hammans and Bill Brasher sent their charges through three days of hard practice this week in an effort to get the Bobcats ready for the first conference and home game here Friday night with the El Dorado Wildcats.

Many injuries confronted the coaches Wednesday but the squad was somewhat strengthened Thursday with the return of Jimmy Simms, star quarterback, who has been absent from practice the first three days of the week due to illness.

Much time has been devoted to tackling. The boys showed a weakness in this department against Snack-over last Friday night.

Based on the scores of the Haynesville games, who defeated both Hope and El Dorado, the Wildcats hold a 12-point dope advantage and will outweigh the Bobcats.

Season Tickets
With Mena coming here October 4 to complete the 1941 schedule Hope fans who hold season tickets are entitled to see three games free. There are seven home games, four conference at 75 cents and three non-conference at 50 cents. The gate-price of the four conference games alone amounts to $3, the cost of a season ticket.

The athletic board said that the national grounds would, as usual, be on hand to direct traffic and appealed to local citizens to park where they are told to park.

To Broadcast
The Hope High School and the El Dorado School will listen to each others broadcast over the radio Friday morning when they plan to split a 30-minute program.

The program follows: School Song, 15 min; for the Bobcats; Yell: Is Everybody Happy, Band to play, talks by Thomas Gordon and Miss Beryl Henry, Yell: Who You for Gang, talks by Captain Breeding and Coach Hammans, 15 min; for El Dorado, Yell: Yea Red, Yea White.

German Guns Shell Dover; 2 Are Killed

British Airmen Bomb French Coast, Kiel Base and Berlin

LONDON — (AP) — Long-range German guns flung shells across the channel into Dover Thursday afternoon while the Nazi assault on London was renewed by two waves of bombers.

Shells bursting in Dover killed a man and a woman. For over an hour the bombardment continued.

The warplanes which flew against London did not penetrate the center of the city but were veered off about the time they reached the defense ring.

The British air ministry announced that heavy attacks were made Wednesday night on Berlin with hits made on the great Temple of airport, power stations and rail communications. The great naval base of Kiel was also raided.

British airmen bombed the German-held "invasion" coast for 45 minutes Thursday. Terrific detonations were heard on the English side as virtually one continuous reverberation.

German Ship Captured
OTTAWA — (AP) — The Canadian armed merchant cruiser, Prince Robert, captured a German express cargo ship Wester off Mananillo, Mexico, Navy Angus Macdonald announced Thursday.

German Ships Sunk
LONDON — (AP) — British submarines torpedoed three German supply ships. The Admiralty disclosed Thursday, but the communiqué did not specify the date or place of the engagement.

Ciano to Berlin
BERLIN — (AP) — Italy's Foreign Minister Ciano was enroute to Germany Thursday as diplomatic activity appeared to foreshadow early developments in the Axis war program and perhaps aligning new allies against Britain.

German officialdom declined to discuss Ciano's purpose.

British Bombard Outpost
ROME — (AP) — The high command announced Thursday that British warships again bombarded Sidi Barrani, Italian outpost in Egypt, and that British planes bombed the important port of Tobruk, on the Libyan coast not far from the Egyptian frontier.

British Withdraw
LONDON — (AP) — The British navy and the "free" French forces of General de Gaulle abruptly withdrew from Dakar, and the British announced officially Wednesday that they had given up a costly three-day naval and air battle for that key port of French West Africa.

The British Ministry of Information said it never had been Britain's intention to "enter into serious warlike operations" against the French, and that de Gaulle, himself, was "most anxious that he should not be the cause of bloodshed to his fellow countrymen."

The British acknowledged that the Dakar shore batteries scored hits on British ships, said that the port suffered bombardment, and that two French Senegal submarines were sunk. Casualties on both sides were acknowledged.

Even the newest of French battleships, the Richelieu, which the British had reported they put out of action in a special expedition to Dakar last July 8, joined in the fray. Aground, it still used its guns, and

Answering Your Questions About CONSCRIPTION

Even Senators Are Asking Questions About Draft Law

500 Queries Daily About the Selective Draft

First of a series of daily articles by Milton Bronner interpreting new rulings on the conscription program.

By MILTON BRONNER
Manager, NEA Selective Service Information Bureau

WASHINGTON — If Capt. Ernest M. Culligan, public relations officer of the joint army and navy selective service committee, doesn't land in a padded cell, it will be because he has the patience of Job and the constitution of a champion boxer.

Captain Culligan is Uncle Sam's official question-and-answer man on the draft law. Newspapersmen and other callers besiege him all day long. He gets an average of 500 telephone calls during his daily office hours, which are from 8 in the morning until 9 or 10 or any old time at night.

Maybe his past career specially fitted him for the job. A New York City native, he was a real estate man and public relations counselor before he came to Washington as special assistant to Nathan Straus, Jr., of the U. S. Housing Authority.

Even Senators Ask Questions
One of the oddest things about Culligan's day is that senators and representatives—the very fellows who passed the conscription law—are constantly ringing him up to learn its applications. The solons are being besieged by letters and telegrams from constituents. To get correct replies, they phone Culligan.

Not only that, but pretty nearly every government official from President Roosevelt on down gets queries about the draft, and these too are referred to Culligan.

One woman, who signed herself "Mother" and who evidently is no admirer of the President, asked whether Mr. Roosevelt's four sons would march away to war, which she predicted would occur. She wondered whether James would make pictures of other boys marching away. Elliott would describe the scene on the radio, Franklin, Jr., would make a written record, and John would try to sell the draftees something.

One of the answers came next day when Elliott Roosevelt was sworn in as a captain in the army's special reserve corps.

A man wrote that he was an admirer of the New Deal, but he would be doubled-damned if he'd surrender his liberty and be conscripted. He wanted the President to assign him to a labor camp.

Crank letters like this, of course, never reach the President's desk. They are culled out and referred to the proper departments to be dealt with, if they aren't thrown in the wastebasket.

"Can't You Draft My Husband?"
Many wives have been writing Captain Culligan to find out how they can keep their husbands out of the draft. But there is a funny reverse English on this. In many cases, wives have been deserted or neglected for other women, and they think it would be a good idea if their mates could spend a year in the army.

Another frequent wonderer whether he'd have to register as he had served 10 years in prison. He was told he'd have to register, but it was a cinch he wouldn't be drafted. He let out a loud snort of relief.

A frequent question is: "I shall be out of my home town October 16. What shall I do?"
The reply is: Register in the town or village where you happen to be, and list on the registration card your home address.

Another query asks whether the procedure if the eligible man is out of the country on registration day. In that case, he should report back at the registration place in his home district within five days after his return to the United States.

A senator asked whether a veteran of the World War had to register. The answer was:

"Hardly. Present registrants must be between the ages of 21 and 35. A man to come within those limits must have been no more than 13 at the time of the World War. It is hardly likely he enlisted or was conscripted at that tender age."

"Shall I Buy a New Car?"
Another man asked:
"Can you tell me whether I will be drafted? If I am, I will patch up my old car; if not, I'll buy a new car."

He was told it depended on his physical condition, his job and the order in which his number was drawn. So he'll have to gamble on the car problem.

Another query came from a young man who confessed he had served a sentence at the age of 15. He said he was anxious to get into the army and wondered whether his past would bar him. He was told that if he had committed a felony he would certainly be barred, and probably would be barred regardless of the crime.

Felipe, a Filipino, drives a taxi in Washington. He only rents his taxi, because he hopes to be drafted. He wanted to know how soon he would be called, as he felt this would help him become a full-fledged American citizen earlier.

He doesn't want to be a national of the Philippines, as he highly disapproves of President Quezon's efforts to untie the islands from the United States.

1941 Fords Go on Display

Beautiful Models Are Larger, Ride Softer

DEARBORN, Mich. — The new Ford line is released for public inspection Thursday.

There has been a lot of advance discussion of changes. And changes there are, starting off with a considerable increase in size for the Ford V-8's, DeLuxe and Super DeLuxe.

Designers have taken full advantage of increased wheelbase and overall lengths to give added spaciousness, and Ford engineers have worked right up from bigger drives through to luxury seat cushions and new softer springs for the solid enhancement of riding comfort.

A new four cylinder truck and commercial car engine is part of the economy features included in the Ford working line.

The wheelbase of these big new DeLuxe and Super DeLuxe Ford V-8's is longer and the overall length greater. The designers have taken advantage of this extra overall to increase the inside body length both in foot room and seating width. In fact, the front seat of the sedan is seven inches wider than last year. The head room is greater and the window area, already larger in previous Ford cars, is even larger this year.

Running boards have practically disappeared from sight, due to the width of the new bodies. But they are there to step off when the doors are open.

The 85 horsepower V-8 engine is still unique as it is in the only eight cylinder car in the low price field. These new Fords have lower transmission gear ratios thus hiking up the "get-away."

In addition to beauty both inside and outside the Ford engineers emphasize the greatly improved ride in all 1941 models. This extra riding comfort starts with two inches longer wheelbase and a new electrically welded "X" type frame. This new frame structure is 100 per cent more rigid, making the body now mounted on big rubber cushions still quieter in service. The springs, front and rear, with their increased effective length, have a balanced action eliminating any "pitching" and give the easiest kind of ride. The rear seat cushions are two inches farther ahead of the rear spring and axle, which further improves the riding qualities.

The four lever-type hydraulic shock absorbers now have a more sensitive adjustment to match the new softer acting springs. The new improved ride stabilizer, connected by swinging shackles to the front axle, minimizes side sway and improves steering.

Super DeLuxe cushions are unusually comfortable since luxury type interior.

Prescott Gets a New Armory

Guard Armory to Have Drill Floor 75 by 100

PRESOTT — Construction of the National Guard armory in Prescott will be started within the next week, it was announced by WPA officials and the state Military Department, Wednesday.

Plans and specifications received by F. E. Wharton, WPA engineer, call for a building 105 by 130 feet. Walls will be red face brick with stone trim. The armory will provide facilities for Company S, 153rd Infantry, local unit of the National Guard, and for emergency military units organized during absence of the National Guard unit.

Some features of the building are: An unobstructed drill floor, 75 by 100 feet, locker rooms for an infantry company, shower baths, supply and ordinance rooms, kitchen, garages for motor vehicles and three offices.

The site facing East First street in the city park, was donated by the city last year.

Wittenberg & Deloney of Little Rock are architects and will have a representative here Friday to make the preliminary surveys.

Several persons in Hempstead county, according to Miss Fletcher have already expressed a desire to enter birds in the state show.

Action Taken by Roosevelt Strikes Japan

Scrap Iron to Be Sold Only to Western Hemisphere, Britain

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Roosevelt Thursday ordered registration on exports of scrap iron and steel which will permit them after October 16 to go only to countries in the Western Hemisphere and to Great Britain.

A statement issued by the White House said that Roosevelt approved the establishment of additional controls over the exportation of iron and steel scrap "with a view to conserving an available supply to meet the rapidly expanding requirements of the defense program of this country."

No mention was made of Japan, which has been a big buyer of scrap, but the latest step to restrict exports immediately was regarded by some authorities as an additional indication of this country's dissatisfaction with Japan's policies in the Far East.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisons waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with aching and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

relationship.

In his autobiography, "Round-Bay Round," published today, Dempsey tells of his customary strategy of rushing his foe at the outset, landing the initial blow and taking immediate command of the situation.

That was his plan against Gene and he came in, weaving from side to side and threw a left hook. But, his own right counter-blow took me on the side of the head with a force that staggered me.

In Bad Shape

"Instead of my having landed the first blow, against a formidable opponent, softening him up for the entire fight, Tunney had handed it to me. I tried, not to let him see how badly I had been shaken up. I was even able to fool a good many of the reporters. Only a few of them wrote that I was barely able to weather the round. Tunney easily out-pointed Dempsey to win the title. Dempsey attributes his loss to a three-year lay-off the effects of an attack of grippe, and nervousness brought on by lawsuits.

Jack retired but was persuaded by Tex Rickard, the promoter, to try and regain the crown. First, Rickard booked him against Jack Sharkey, and Dempsey knocked Sharkey out with a left hook to the jaw while the Boston sailor had his hands down and his face turned to the referee in protest of an alleged low punch.

Dempsey answers criticism of this blow with the comment that "except when a fighter is down and taking the count he is required to defend himself at all times."

When Jack nailed Gene in the seventh round of their return tilt at Chicago in 1927 he thought he had regained the title, that Gene would

YESTERDAY, Once again he had that young clerk in trying to sell some of his own property for an alleged site. Nick's party could make capital of that to his own candidate. Nick predicted trouble at the Smithson factory, where Joe works. And there is a strike, he tells Mrs. Mary. "What are you smart operators work."

JOE MAKES PLANS

CHAPTER XVI

SUE MARY couldn't sleep. The hot August night wind merely moved the bedroom curtains and she tossed and wondered, puzzled, and could find no answer.

A strike! picket lines, fights, and police squads. She thought of the women she had met when she went to parties with Joe, wives of the plant workers. What would they do when the departments closed down and the pay checks ceased to come? How would they manage to run their homes, feed their families when their tommeager savings ran out?

And what would happen when the material needed by the plant factory ceased to be produced? What would happen, then, to that part of the national defense plan? She wanted to ask all those questions and more, too; when she saw Joe later in the week. They had gone to a movie and then, coming from the air-cooled theater into the city heat, had turned the car out toward the lake for a few last moments of air.

"What would happen if your factory went on strike?" she asked finally.

Joe slowed down and looked at her, astonished.

"What would happen? Well, plenty, I suppose. We're really speeding up production now, with all these plant orders. But why should we go on strike?"

"Oh, I don't know. I guess I read something about a new union contract being negotiated at the factory," she explained lamely.

"Sure, but that doesn't mean we're going to strike. A new contract comes up every year, but we don't strike about it. Our representatives and the management get together and work things out."

She breathed deeply and settled back against the car seat. "I'm glad. I just wondered if there could be a strike. With picket lines and trouble—like there used to be."

"Well, it's possible, I suppose," Joe agreed.

"But certainly not probable. That part of unionism is about never recover in ten seconds from the flailing he had received. But Dempsey went to the wrong corner after the knock-down and had to be directed by Referee Dave Barry to a corner farther away. Then Barry began counting over Gene, starting at "one" rather than picking up the count with the timekeeper.

That Long Count

This was the now famous "long count," from 14 to 17 seconds, and it gave Tunney time enough to recuperate. He back-pedaled until his head cleared and went on to outbox Dempsey. This was Dempsey's fifth million-dollar gate. The crowd of 102,464, paid around two and a half over. I mean the battles and sit-downs.

"Of course, there's always a certain element in every plant that would cause trouble. You get some of these smart guys and let them talk wild and a few dopes who can't think for themselves might follow along. But most of the men realize they are necessary in the work. Soldiers, sort of. And I hope the management won't take advantage of it. The work in the plants in this town together pretty much: making different parts for planes and cars and both of those are necessary if we're going to keep our country safe."

Joe drew up along the beach and stopped the car. A hot, yellow moon bathed the waves in gold, and off in the distance a radio played softly. He took her in his arms and kissed her.

"You never used to worry about such things. I wish you wouldn't now. What you should be thinking about is us; about getting married. I haven't mentioned it lately because you—well, you didn't seem to want me to. I guess you were so interested in that crowd you work and play with that you saw me as a pretty dull fellow."

His voice was low, filled with emotion.

"Sue Mary, I love you now, and I always will, and I do have a future. My boss told me yesterday that I'm to be in the research department from now on. I'll get a raise and there'll be more money in the future. And that's the work I want; the work I prepared for in college. And if you were only mine, well—I guess I could know real happiness."

"You do love me," he said, finally looking down at her. "I can tell it when you kiss me. That's all that matters. So let's set the date. We'll find an apartment, start buying furniture and get married before you find something else to worry about."

She rubbed her cheek against his and tried not to let him sense her worry. She wished she could set the date. She wished she could settle things that simply, but first she meant to discover what Vera and Nick and Natalie were working for, why they had used her.

If she were to tell Joe he would be furious. He would probably start out now and with swinging fists settle Nick to his own satisfaction.

It's not that I'm being melodramatic, she argued to herself. It's just that I feel responsible. I did get taken in. I did get Vera that job at the office, and I was a fool. But now I'm awake, and maybe they are dangerous. If their loyalty to their cause can make them go to such lengths, certainly I can do my duty.

A year ago politics was just a word to me. "Un-American activities" was a scare-phrase. Fifth Columnists hadn't even appeared in print. Maybe I'm hysterical; maybe there isn't anything to fear, but I have to satisfy my curiosity.

JOE'S voice brought her back to the present. "Well, darling, say something. Shouldn't we get married?"

"Yes," she said. "I want to. Joe, we will, but we can't do it in such a short time."

"If you really love me there is something you can do right away," he told her. "You can break away from the Youth Progress crowd. You won't be lonely from now on. We'll see each other every night if you want, and you can keep busy shopping for our home. Girls always have plenty to buy at a time like this."

"Give up that crowd and move some place else. Make a clean break. They aren't our kind of people."

"I will, Joe," Sue Mary promised. "Give me time. They are my friends. I—I can't just drop them. When I was lonely they helped me. They've taught me to think and to see a whole new world. I can't just walk out on them simply because you don't like them."

She wanted time. If only a miracle could happen within a week and she could convince herself there was no danger, that they weren't a menace. But back in her mind hovered that horrible doubt.

"You're dodging the issue, Sue Mary," Joe took his arms away and turned to look at her. "One moment you say you love me and then the next you seem to try to block our hopes and plans for marriage. That crowd of crackpots means nothing to you, I do. Now stop stalling and make the break."

"Joe, we mustn't quarrel. Not now." She had to make him understand. "You know I love you and I want to marry you. Let me take a little time to settle my own affairs."

"All right, Sue Mary. I'm not trying to be unfair. Take a week. It's not so unusual for a girl to want to get married. Tell them that and then move, and you won't have to see them any more."

"I'll try, darling."

A week. She wondered just what she could do in a week.

Arkansas May Spring Surprise

Famous Passing May Go to Ground Game

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Indications are that the Arkansas Razorbacks, long known as one of the leading exponents of the forward pass, will forsake the overhead game and try an old-fashioned ground attack against the Central Oklahoma Teachers in the season's opener here Saturday.

Reasons for this belief are, first, the fact that Estes McDaniel, 200-pound veteran back, and the sophomore Babe Cialone have shown extraordinary ability to crack the line in scrimmage and get away for long runs. Three other backs, Schmidt, Neal and Forte, have looked consistently good in carrying the ball.

The other reason is that none of the backs has shown the necessary ability to throw the ball accurately. Hamberg and Neat are doing fair passing but neither possesses the passing legibility that Kay Eakin, Jack Robbins and other Arkansas passing wizards of the last few years had.

The big Razorback forward wall, averaging 207 pounds from tackle to tackle, can be depended on to open holes for the backs. Once through the line, McDaniel and Cialone, both speedsters in spite of their heft, are mighty hard to stop.

The early-season gloom on the Arkansas campus has given way to a more cheerful outlook as the season's opener approaches. In fact, many Razorback supporters believe that the Arkansas eleven is going to surprise

In the early chapter Dempsey tells of his youth in Colorado, his work in the coal mines, his decision to follow two older brothers, mediocre fighters, into the ring and a half dozen years of fruitless wandering around, trying to arrange bouts that would advance him into the top flight.

His success started when Doc Kearns became his manager. Doc quickly elected to send Jack against a top notch, more experienced fighter, Gunboat Smith. Although out of his feet and dozed, Dempsey won. Doc made him work up the hard way. Tackling one opponent after another who was supposedly better than Jack.

At the start of 1918 Dempsey was still a long way back. There were ten championship fighters standing between him and Champion Jess Willard. But during that year Dempsey won from Carl Morris, Bill Brennan, Fred Fulton, Homer Smith, Jim Flynn, Gunboat Smith, Battling Levinsky and Porky Flynn. He fought a draw with Billy Miske and later out-pointed him.

Willard's triumph brought him a title fight against Willard at Toledo July 4, 1918. He knocked Jess down a half dozen times or more in the first round and thought he had kayoed him. But in the wild confusion of the referee counted over the fallen Jess, no one heard the bell that saved Willard. Dempsey had bet $10,000 at 10 to 1 that he would stop the champion in the first round. In the third Dempsey gave Jess such a beating that Willard's handlers threw in the towel.

As champion Dempsey had three more fights, against Billy Miske and Bill Brennan, whom he finally knocked out, and Tommy Gibbons, whom he outpointed. He explains his bad performances by saying he was not in good shape.

The high spots of his career as champion were against Georges Carpentier at Boyles' Thirty Acres in New Jersey and against Firpo, the Wild Bull of the Pampas. The Carpentier fight, with its bally-hoo as an international event, drew the biggest crowd up to that time. Dempsey won with a third round knockout.

He had trouble with Firpo, Dempsey belted the Argentinian down several times in the first round only to have Firpo get up and knock him through the ropes onto the row of sportswriters. Dempsey got back into the ring, survived that round and then kayoed Firpo in the next round. The fight was perhaps the most spectacular in boxing history.

Dempsey closes the book with an illustrated chapter on how to box. The book, written in collaboration with Myron M. Stearns, is published by Whitely House.

Large Crowds Attend Meet

Methodist Revival Enters Fifth Day, Night

The services at the Methodist church under the direction of the Pastor, Rev. Kenneth Spore, continue to increase in interest and attendance. Sunday school night brought out one of the largest crowds the church has seen this year. Wednesday night, the services featured the Board of Stewards. Out of the 48, there were only a very few missing. Reverend Spore took as his subject, "Thy Kingdom Come," which he called the title chapter of Christianity. This portion of the Lord's Prayer which is used sometimes without realizing the full importance of it, was interpreted by him in a dynamic and forceful manner. He said, in part:

"No subject upon which our minds can be exercised can bring as deep stirrings of the heart as this petition, 'Thy kingdom come.' 'You and I,' he said, 'have prayed this from a lisping child up to the present hour. 'Thy kingdom come' but how serious have been our thoughts? What did Jesus mean for this concept to be? Throughout the teachings of Jesus we hear, 'Thy kingdom come, thy kingdom come.' To him the Kingdom is the pearl of great price, the most important thing in the universe. The Kingdom involves three ideas: first, the Sovereign, which is Christ Jesus, one who loves us in spite of sin and places an unlimited area for us to exercise the right of being his children; second, the rules. These are applied in carrying forward the Kingdom. The rules of God's Kingdom that we desire and all mankind, the subjects. This means the citizens, those intelligent mortals who subject themselves to the rules of the Kingdom. The Kingdom of God is real. It does not exist in some far off manner."

Up to the present time, Reverend Spore announced, there have been 15 accessions to the church. Mr. Martin is finding a great response from the Young People's Services, which are held immediately after school and at 6:45 in the evening. This song service gives to the general meeting a great deal of enthusiasm. The meetings will continue through this week and next week, closing on October 6. If you have not been in attendance you are missing a great deal which will mean much to your church and community life. The services begin at 10 in the morning and at 7:30 in the evening.

Fine Furs for This and That You Can Take Your Price on Furs This Year

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

How will you have your fur this year? In big or little doses? At a price you care for? An albino mink coat at $9,000 (very rare)? Or will you spend $1.95 for a hatpin tipped for a great fur pompon?

In any case, the be-furred look is yours if you want it. And you will want it if you aren't deaf to style notes.

At the New York fashion openings, fur in its many new guises just about stole the show.

It isn't surprising to find that fur coats at all price ranges are both better looking and less expensive than ever before. The trend has been in that direction for some time, what with improved breeding and manufacturing processes.

Wide Range of Uses
What is surprising is the great originality displayed in the styling of furs.

Whoever heard of a sedate little cloth suit having cuffs of flamboyant red fox?

Whoever heard of big clumsy sports shoes in leopard skin?

And how would you like a silver fox head for a handbag?

Or a black Persian lamb coat with box pleats, of all things, in the skirt?

Or ermine tails for earrings?

Most all-fur coats have a little more collar and a little less shoulder than they had last year.

Most of them have interesting sleeves. One sleeve is made to be pushed up, just like a sweater sleeve. Detached fur is the best new idea as trimming for cloth coats?

Use It in Two Places
If your coat comes with a separate Spanish shawl of beaver, it's obvious the shawl will be endlessly useful on its own account.

For a quaint look, adopt one of those tiny little fur shoulder capes and repeat the fur in a muff or a bag.

The one rule for smartness is to use fur in at least two places on your costume?

If you wear a pompon pin in your hat, stick another on your purse. Or match up a fur necklace with a fur belt, or fur earrings with fur bows on your shoes.

It's a great fur season, an invitation to experiment in new ways to gain the be-furred look.

Harrison in Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

'Star Greet Columnist Under Mistletoe,' and Paul Finds There IS a Santa Claus

HOLLYWOOD—Just as your correspondent begins to hie him at Hollywood, with glum cracks about slow business in show business, along comes something bright and new. As bright maybe, as the Preston Sturges picture called "Christmas in July," and as daffy as Santa Claus in a fur-trimmed bathing suit.

These novelties, together with a theater forecourt filled with gaily laden Christmas trees, a half-ton of movie snow, cuties in shorts, fire-reminders, were supplemented in my case with a tabouret subsequently titled in picture captions: "Star Greet Columnist Under Mistletoe."

The actress was Marie Wilson. The guy was I. The idea came from a press agent, a generous and impulsive individual to whom I must remember to send at least a case of Scotch. The blazing lights, large crowd and overhanging mistletoe made everything all right.

"Where Was Nick Grinde?"

It might be considered unalluring for a fellow to mention his—ah—romantic experiences, however achieved. But this incident needs some explaining, I think, because the photographers were busy and their shots now are being circulated all over. True, in most of them the kissing couple are identified as "Miss Marie Wilson and friends." But some olgal gossipers are asking: "Where was Nick Grinde the night of the 'Christmas in July' preview?"

Well, it happens that Mr. Grinde (the "G" is not silent) was directing a picture that evening, so Miss Wilson went to the preview with her agent. No well-brought-up actress will kiss an agent, so when the halcyon boys pleaded for a mistletoe picture—and since we were standing there talking, anyway—I got a break.

It was fun. As we went into a clinch I remember hearing some feminine bystander asking a little indignantly: "Who's the big lug kissing that beautiful Wilson girl?"

And some juvenile autograph hound replied: "I dunno, but I bet he ain't no actor. Look—he knocked her hat off!"

Marie was awfully gracious about the hat, a new and fragile number which had fallen into powdered snow. Somebody rescued it while I stood there dazedly wondering if there'd be a retake. There was. Photographers are awfully nice people. One of them said, "Will you hold it for another, please?"

So we did it again, and the hat stayed on that time. I thought of swinging around a bit to hide the actress and thus make a third hat necessary. But she out-manuevered me. Shutters clicked and the camera men hastened off to snap other rivals amid the goofy setting.

Santa Claus Miniature
Many remarkable ballyhoo stunts have been staged outside premier theaters, but this certainly is the first time irreverent press agents literally have kidded the pants off Santa Claus.

The bewhiskered, bare-legged saint in the red bathing suit was symbolic only of the picture's title, Dick Powell and Ellen Drew are the stars of "Christmas in July," which is an ingratiating comedy involving an ordinary young couple and a considerable amount of money in a buying spree.

Like "The Great McGinty," a surprise package delivered by Writer Preston Sturges in his first directing assignment, this one also points up the advantages of co-ordinate draftsmanship in moviemaking.

In Obscurity Strange Things Are Done

One of the most striking things about this war—perhaps it is a necessary attribute of any war—is the way in which all must shape our courses in semi-darkness.
 We know the facts are the first requisite of forming a judgment, then the world today is a sorry place for forming judgments. And so it is.
 The recent official statements on war casualties are a good example. The Germans have announced their casualties for the first year of the war, including the conquest of Poland, Belgium, Holland, Norway, and France. The cost, says the official German statement, was 33,000 dead, 143,000 wounded, and 24,000 missing—a total of 200,000 casualties.
 Is this accurate? No one can say with certainty. It may be, for the German blitz type of attack appears to have been less costly than old-fashioned operations, the severity of much of the fighting, seems to suggest far greater losses. But that is merely a suspicion. No one can prove the German claims untrue.
 When it comes to planes, somebody is definitely wrong. The Germans claim to have destroyed 6950 enemy planes in all the conquered countries. They claim to have lost only 1050.
 The British claim that 3945 German planes have been destroyed (the Germans admitting to only 1050). The British meanwhile admit losing 1012, which leaves a large number of the German claim of 6950 to be charged up to Poland and France. What minimum core of truth can be chiseled out of these conflicting claims? None, except that Britain and Germany each admit losing more than 1000 planes.
 What damage is being done in either country by air bombing? We cannot know. All we know is the pictures showing destruction of anything of military value. Either or both sides might already have been reduced to a state of non-productiveness and we would not know it.
 American press associations and newspapers spend money like water; their reporters and cameramen risk their lives to find the truth. But they can at best illuminate about a dark room with a flashlight.
 All of humanity is a little like that today. It owes a debt to those who are desperately striving to cast patches of light on the dark scene.

WE THE WOMEN

It Is a Shock—To Be Waked Up From a Pleasant Dream

By RUTH MILLETT
 Wouldn't it be fine if we could still believe the world to be the civilized place we thought it was on its way to becoming only ten years ago? If we could be those dreamy-eyed people we were then—sure that we had made the world safe for democracy. We were certain that the first World War would never be repeated, that we had all grown too smart for that kind of waste and bloodshed.
 It would be fine if we could be certain as we were then that we would never get in another European war because we had become too smart.
 We would never initiate war.

We'd all like to feel again that we live in a world where it is always "our next move" and not, perhaps, the other fellow's. We'd know that since we "don't want war," we'd never make the move toward it. Life would be perfect if we could just believe again that our great war had been fought and won, and would never have to be fought again. It would be comforting to think that we could go back to the days when we believed that man, done with fighting, could spend his precious life in bettering his own lot. With an eternity of peace ahead, the world could be made into a more fit place for all of humankind.
 Road of Progress Is Rocky One

But we can't go back. We know that we were just enjoying a nice dream, and that now we are awake. We know that in the world as it really is, there is no moving steadily ahead toward better things; that it is even harder for humanity as a whole than it is

Pressure Groups Say Permanent Solution Needed

WASHINGTON — Mark down the words "total defense" as two which you are likely to hear a great deal more of in the near future.
 As used here, they refer less to army and navy preparations than to the old basic problem of unemployment, unsolved after seven years of the New Deal. The signs right now hint strongly that a brand-new attack on this old problem may presently be made—possibly before the election, more likely (depending, of course, on the way the voting goes) shortly after it.
 The point is that for a good many months a number of influential pressure groups have been insisting that the nation will never have "total defense" until its productive capacity is fully employed and all its jobless citizens are back at work. This point of view is shared by some of the top economists within the New Deal. On both sides it is felt that recovery and re-employment due solely to defense spending won't be enough; that some permanent solution to the whole problem has got to be found.

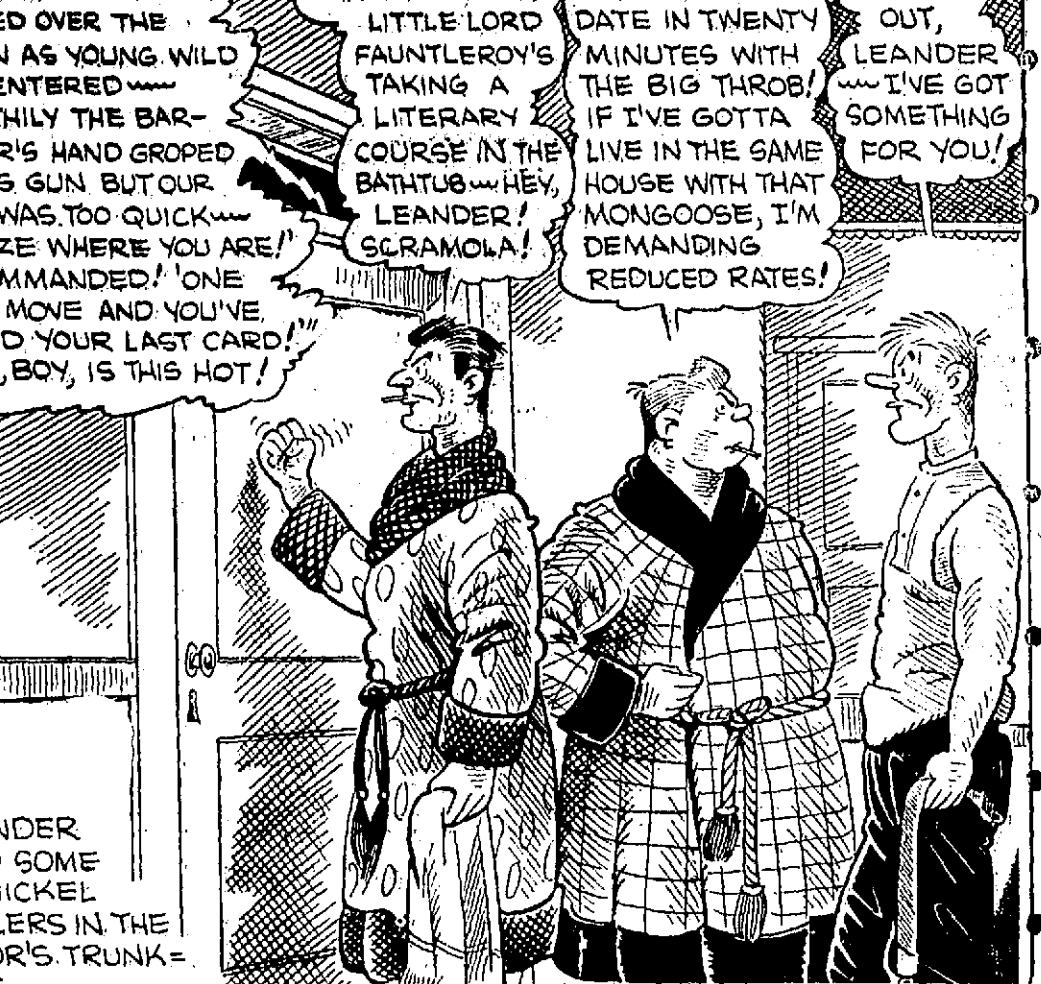

Church Leaders Want Action
 Early last June, an Interfaith Conference of Catholics, Protestant and Jewish leaders met here to consider the unemployment problem. This conference, after three days' discussion, urged the government to set up a continuing commission of representatives of consumers, farmers, labor, finance, manufacturing, education, religion and government "for devising co-operative, democratic measures to solve the unemployment problem."

A couple of months earlier a similar demand was made by the National Consumers League through its president, Josephine Roche, who was also chairman of the President's Interdepartmental Committee to Coordinate Health and Welfare Activities. Miss Roche remarked that industrial revival so far had not cured unemployment, and declared that "the gravity and immediacy of the problem" called for a concerted attack.

Berlin's Lady Is a Mystery

Lady Haw Haw Is Short-Wave Heroine to Germans

By MADELIN BLITZSTEIN
NEA Service Special Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA — Lady Haw Haw is a short-wave heroine to the Germans, a confounded nuisance to the British, and a mystery woman to Philadelphians who hear her extol Nazi virtues from Berlin.

Latest slick trick of German radio propaganda, the feminine counterpart of famed Lord Haw Haw intrigues the good citizens of this town for one reason: they think she may be one of them.

They want to know if she is really Constance Drexel and if she is the Constance Drexel of Philadelphia, lecturer, world traveler, disarmament planner, one-time reporter on the Philadelphia Ledger.

Here's how it is: Constance Drexel left Philadelphia in June 1939, Walter Weigle, superintendent of the apartment house where she lived, says. He received several letters from her, after she went abroad, saying she expected to get a radio job. Weigle for one believes the voice of Lady Haw Haw is that of Constance Drexel. He adds that Miss Drexel knew no German, spoke no French, went to bed every night at 9 and got up at 6 every morning.

Several months ago an American "military expert" listening to a broadcast from Germany said: "I know that voice. That's Constance Drexel of Philadelphia." A few weeks later Philadelphia newspapers received letters telling of the wonders of German-made movies; the letters were signed "Constance Drexel."

Britons Worry About Floods

Express Hope That Charleston Was Not Hurt

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Item on the British point of view this story isn't new, but it has never been told and in view of what is going on in England it is, I think, worth the telling.

A few weeks ago, President Roosevelt received from some old friends of his in England, whose names must remain no more than Lord and Lady Blank, a long letter. The bulky envelope contained a vast number of clippings from the small-town newspapers of England, Scotland and Wales and each of them was a humorous during the Nazi bombings.

An old woman, during an air attack, had herded her pigs and cows into an air shelter, but had herself remained outside; a village squire, whose fashionable marriage had been interrupted by an air raid alarm, kissed his bride in the candle dusk of the local shelter and signalled the village's hot-potloi to join him in the wedding celebration; an ancient veteran of other days had refused to take cover and stumped about, adding great oaths to the anti-aircraft shells that were hurled at the invaders.

Clipping after clipping recounted some spirited tale of British John Smith's attitude toward his tormentors. But what impressed the President far more was that his old friends had not one word to say about the havoc being visited on London. Instead, they concluded their letter thus: "Mail travels slowly and we have just heard with great sorrow of the terrific storms which have swept over your southern states. We sincerely hope that no damage has come to that beautiful old city of Charleston."

Item on hero-worship: The senate pages are, for the most part, about as well-behaved a bunch of youngsters as I ever have run across. That dignity of the senate (even though it is often phony) seems to have seeped into their behavior and whatever they think about it, they do a pretty good job of conducting themselves. There are occasions when some youthful impulse gets the better of them.

At the recent funeral services of the late Speaker, William Bankhead, there wasn't a page who didn't deport himself with proper respect and sincerity, but when the ceremony was over and the house chamber cleared, a small group of them gathered in awe-struck silence about the chair in front of the Speaker's dais in which President Roosevelt had sat. Not a word was said, but four of the boys, bolder than the rest, marched solemnly up to the chair, settled back in it for a moment and, without a smile or a brag, walked out of the chamber.

Hopkins Will Be Heard
Item for future reference: Harry Hopkins, recently resigned as secretary of commerce, and for many years one of the President's most trusted friends and advisers, has left Washington and taken up residence in Essex House, looking from the south across New York City's great Central Park.

A one-time social service worker who rose so high in government councils and resigned his cabinet post because of ill health is, according to close friends, no richer than when he came to Washington and in order to maintain himself will, in spite of illness, devote his time to writing and lecturing.

Friends say that almost immediately you can look for magazine articles from Hopkins on matters social and political and that books on government affairs probably will follow.

G-2 Must Keep Army Informed
Gen. Miles Watches Europe War for Army

By TOM WOLF
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
Responsibility for keeping the U. S. Army informed on results, techniques, and significance of action in the European war falls on the husky shoulders of a new "G-2."

"G-2" is the army name for the Military Intelligence Division and also for its chief. The new "G-2" is cold square-jawed efficient Brig. Gen. Sherman Miles, assistant chief of staff in charge of "G-2."

General Miles was well schooled for the supremely important command he has assumed. He was born in Washington, D. C. in December, 1882, with a silver saber in his mouth. His father, Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, was onetime commanding general of the U. S. Army.

General Miles, the younger, joined the cavalry as a young "second looney" fresh out of West Point in 1905 and almost immediately saw service in Cuba.

Six years later he was starting a long career of foreign service. He went to Rumania as a military attaché. During the next few years he served in this capacity in Rumania, Bulgaria, and Russia.

The end of the World War found the young lieutenant colonel (temporary) assistant chief of staff for Military Intelligence for the 1st Army Corps (to which fell the Meuse-Argonne offensive).

After the war General Miles continued his training, which culminated last September when he sailed for London to serve as military attaché there. While on high seas, en route home from these responsibilities, he was promoted to brigadier general.

General Miles is in many respects the exact opposite of gay, witty Col. E. R. Warner McCabe, his predecessor, now on leave pending retirement. He has few hobbies. He used to play golf, but quit when he found that by "just walking" he could get the exercise without the annoyance of a high golf score.

Don't Let the Goat Fool You

Melissa the Mutt Is the Navy's Mascot

By JOHN GROBER
AP Feature Service Writer
ANNAPOLIS — Navy's 1940 football team is hitched to Melissa's rising star.

She's just a dog, a homely little creature who looks like something you'd find in a vacuum cleaner bag after a big weekend party. She's got charm though—the Navy goes for her credit for licking the Army football team last year after a lean decade.

Melissa came up the hard way. Last year she was strictly nobody, a muddy little mutt who was mascot for the scrub team. Bill VIII, the handsome Navy goat, was the varsity mascot and stepped daintily around with his laundered pet and gilded horns before the big crowds.

The scrub team coach did her mauling in virtual oblivion before a handful of relatives, ever-faithful sweethearts and the half dozen other guys who attend "B" squad games because they're free.

But Bill the goat was nobody's bargain in the mascot profession last year. Navy's varsity gridmen advanced in reverse all season. They were sunk under a five-game losing streak with the Army game coming up when Ma, E. E. (Swede) Larson in desperation reached down into second ranks for reinforcements.

The graduates from the scrubs set up a roller for Melissa to graduate. They swore by their mutt. They said Coach Larson Bill VIII was only a fair weather pal. He just came out to strut on Saturdays. Melissa was regular. She turned out for practice rain or shine, dragging her lucky sweat sock. She was tough—she jumped 50 feet off the roof of the gymnasium and lived to bark it—and Bill was just a pretty boy. Thus they argued.

They won their argument when they pointed out the scrubs hadn't lost a game with Melissa doing her stuff, while the varsity was getting set down unanimously and repeatedly on the back of its lap under Bill's wishy-washy hexing.

The gold braid relented, and Melissa was allowed to make the trip to the Army-Navy game as Beautiful Bill's understudy.

Bill minced out and took his bows for the newsreels with the Army mule. Melissa just stuck to the boys on the bench. The varsity adopted the scrub team ritual and every man rubbed her ears for luck before going out on the field.

Sparked by a couple of Melissa's scrubs, they tore the Army apart for a 10-0 win, and Melissa just about owned the whole U. S. Navy. They gave her a Navy man's most cherished honor, a blue blanket with the gold N-star that denotes a victory over Army.

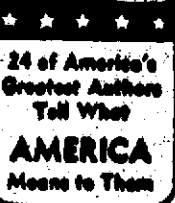

They issued Melissa her sweat sock when the squad got its uniforms this year. She's on the job at every practice, cocking a practiced eye on the fresh beef out for the 1940 varsity.

That's why things are looking up for 1940 Navy football. Melissa is Mrs. Big on the academy campus. The team got its lift from knowing they've got a Grade-A boxer in their pitching jinx at the other side.

So don't be fooled by Bill VIII this fall. He'll be out there, sure enough, gleaming white and pretty as sugar cookie. But he's just a front man. The gal behind the guns is Mighty Melissa, mascot-in-fact and sweetheart of this man's navy when the footballs fly.

The last census of Sweden, December 31, 1938, showed 6,310,214 residents, of whom the majority were females.

OUR COUNTRY

Mental Enemy May Attack Before Physical One, Warns Margaret Culkin Banning

Sixteenth of 24 articles on "Our Country," written exclusively for NEA Service by the nation's most famous authors.

By MARGARET CULKIN BANNING
Author of "Letters to Susan," "The Case for Chastity," "She Teaches Your Children," etc.

We have begun to realize in this country that if we are not actively for democracy we are against it, for every unconvinced mind is a breeding place for the doctrine of totalitarianism.

It will be impossible to fight fanaticism in action with anything less than complete conviction on the other side. And as this fact comes clearer, we see that we must be fully prepared mentally as well as physically to meet the enemy. The mental enemy may get here first. We know that too.

So we can feel the country floundering for a new declaration of political philosophy, for a slogan, that is sufficiently inspiring, fine words fly right and left with it.

Doing the trick of assembling the American philosophy of life. In hundreds of books and magazines are published careful, thorough and inspiring definitions of democracy and to any one of dozens one could pin-point entire faith, if we are merely after words. But obviously words alone are not enough.

I think we are straining too hard after a definition. We can not line up under a definition. We are already lined up under the Declaration of Independence, the Preamble to the Constitution, and the hope that "government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth." And those are words enough, beautiful, popular statements which most of us believe and credit.

Beyond that I think we should realize that we are only trying to preserve our individual free will, and to increase the scope of their operation. To me it is as simple as that. We have been in great measure successful in developing a government in which the free will of men drawn from many countries could exist, even if in operation the free will of many of them was often thwarted by circumstances. But it has never been denied in this country.

The strength of democracy lies in the fact that it does not formulate the exact liberties of the individual. It ensures that there are limits beyond which these liberties must not be tampered with, but within these limits a man may define his own freedom and set his own disciplines or refuse them. Under our democracy the basic agreement is never to relinquish to government the free will of the individual in matters which concern the mind and soul, and never to circumscribe public or private habits to such an extent that the freedom of mind or soul is endangered.

Within this area of habit there must be controls for the public safety and benefit. Those are agreed upon and may be necessary. There is also much blundering, because imperfect, badly educated people can make the operation of democracy faulty. There is cruel pressure, bullying, exploitation of the individual, and we hope to better these things. But in spite of such failures, if a man lives in this country there are many points at which he can say, "You can't do that to me," and be stating his rights. Sometimes he can not maintain his rights. Sometimes he gives some away, to his church, to his employer, to other individuals. But he is the only one who can give them away. They are his until he does.

To me this is the sense of democracy. I want to sense it rather than find words for it. It is enough for me to know—and to fight for—that I can think as I please, worship as I please, and that even if economic forces weigh me down, I am still fundamentally free. Under our government in our democracy, we never hand over to the state the free will of any man. We are right. Even God has never asked for that.

A nation which has faith in itself and in its chosen way of life cannot be corrupted or conquered, writes Faith Baldwin in the next article of this series on "Our Country."

gram after January 1941 which perhaps may be more beneficial than the one proposed.

"I think Homer Adkins should have a free hand to see what he can do about the highway situation in Arkansas," Senator Pilkinton said. "I don't believe we should hamper his best efforts by going to the polls in November and hanging around his neck a program of the out-going administration which the governor-elect says definitely he can improve upon."

Speaking to the Club on refunding Senator Pilkinton said: "It is generally agreed that Arkansas must refund in the very near future if any new pavement is to be built with state funds. Under the present law not one cent of state highway money can be legally spent for new construction. Roads that have been built in Arkansas during the past five years have been constructed with money given us by the federal government. Everyone agrees that Arkansas must refund her highway indebtedness. The real question is 'How shall it be done?'"

The special session of the 1939 Legislature passed a refunding bill which was sponsored by Governor Bailey. When this bill was pending in the senate several senators sought to amend it in such a way as to peg the interest rate at a figure not to exceed 3 per cent. I thought then, and I think now, that 3 per cent is as high an interest rate as the state should pay. However, the governor opposed this amendment, saying that the bill as written represented his best efforts upon the subject and that bands pegged at 3 per cent could not be sold. Our amendment was therefore defeated. In spite of the defeat of our 3 per cent amendment, I voted for the bill as it finally passed the senate for two reasons.

only. First it was the best thing offered at that time and second, because refunding seemed to offer the only hope for immediate aid to highways 29 and 4. However, this act never went into operation as it was referred to the people and its fate depends upon the coming general election in November.

Since the summer of 1939 conditions have changed. Arkansas will have a new governor before any bonds could be refunded under this act even if it should be approved at the polls. Our governor-elect has a very definite workable program of his own in mind which he would like to try. His proposal differs in some details with the Bailey program. Homer Adkins says that he favors an attempt to refund the bonds at an interest rate not to exceed 3 per cent, and he wishes to sell only callable bonds if he can do so at 3 per cent interest. It seems to me that his plan is desirable if bonds can be sold upon the market, which contain these factors. Therefore I think the refunding program which is to be voted on in November should be defeated. It should be defeated in order that there may be no complications, that working out a perhaps better program under the new governor. I think Homer Adkins should have a free hand to see what he can do with the highway situation in Arkansas. I don't believe we should hamper his best efforts by going to the polls in November and hanging around his neck a program of the out-going administration which the governor-elect says definitely he can improve upon.

We all want highways 29 and 4 improved as soon as possible. The next governor has promised to improve them for us. Let's cooperate with him to the fullest extent in his efforts not only to do what we in this section want done but also for the general good of the State of Arkansas."

individual coil springs are used. Over these is a thick pad of latex treated cured hair which gives a softness only associated with expensive cars in the past.

The new Fords have big 12-inch hydraulic brakes, for quick, smooth action and long service. The emergency, or parking brake, is on the rear wheels and operated by a steel cable. The brake lever is under the instrument panel, at the left of the driver. The new hood/look knob is located under the instrument panel near the brake lever. This protects the engine, battery and accessories from theft.

An entirely new body design is included in the 1941 Super DeLuxe line—a sedan coupe. This coupe combines a close coupled body design with comfortable seating for six. Also in the line there is a convertible club coupe, seating five, and equipped with an electrically operated top that functions even when the engine is not running. It is operated by throwing an electric switch.

There are four body types in the DeLuxe line, six in the Super DeLuxe line. There are three color choices for the DeLuxe and six in the Super DeLuxe line.

Among the refinements which are new this year on all models are the speed lines on the side of both front and rear fenders, the new hidden gas-line filler cap, electric light on the luggage compartment lid which automatically lights whenever the lid is raised if the car lights are burning.

Tempered glass one-piece rear windows, a new wide tempered glass one-piece rear window, radio grilles in all cars, twin windshield wipers with speed control, twin sun visors, fender top parking lamps, and two-spoke, clear-vision comfort-type steering wheels. There is a center front license plate on the Super DeLuxe.

German Guns

the British ship poured shells into the stranded vessel.

Hopes Are Disappointed
Genesis of the Dakar venture was laid by the Ministry of Information to de Gaulle who, it said, had reason to believe that the French colony of Senegal would welcome his arrival and establish an anti-German situation such as existed in French Equatorial Africa. The British naval squadron went along the ministry said, to support de Gaulle if he needed aid and because of growing German influence in the colony.

Instead of the welcome he expected, de Gaulle and his white-flagged emissaries, sent ashore from his force of about 7,000 men on six transports, ran into fierce gun fire. The British admiral ordered the French ashore to desist. When they continued shooting, the British guns returned the fire.

Then, after three days, the ministry said, the decision to stop fighting was reached. "When it became plain that only a major operation of war" could win control of the strategic capital of West Africa.

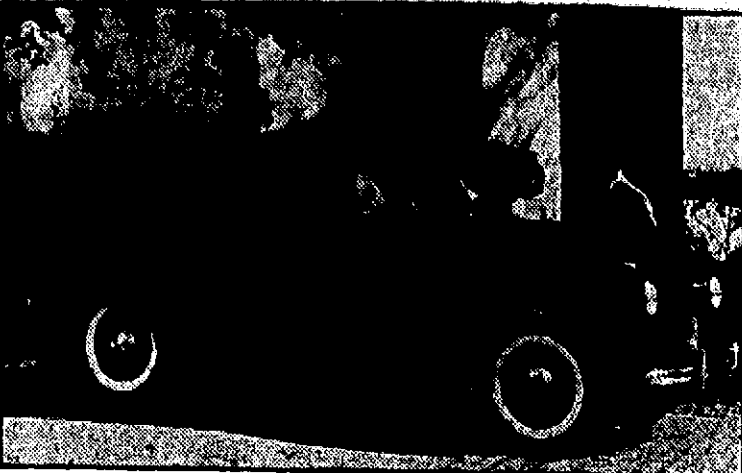

But the ministry asserted "it had never been the intention of his majesty's government to enter into serious warlike operations against those Frenchmen who felt it their duty to obey the command of the Vichy government."

agents.

This "Cavalcade of Electricity" with its two huge tents and 20 trailers was designed by the Rural Electrification Administration as a consumer-education project to show farm families a complete picture of what electricity can do for the farm, the Extension agents said.

Power to operate the electrical equipment and furnish lights for the best tents will be provided by REA power lines. Groups cooperating to make the farm-equipment show a success include the REA-financed farmer electric cooperatives, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Colleges of Agriculture, vocational teachers, farm organizations and manufacturers of electrical appliances and equipment and their distributors and dealers.

The show, already in its third season has played to more than 300,000 farm families during the 110 two-day stands it has made in its trip across rural America. In addition to the quarter of a million dollars worth of electrical equipment that is to be displayed and demonstrated during the show's two-day programs, specialists from the Extension Service and the Rural Electrification Administration will point out the advantages and disadvantages of the appliances and what each can contribute to the farm program.

Mrs. Ida A. Fenton, Extension economist, home management, or Earl L. Arnold, Extension agricultural engineer, will represent the Agricultural Extension Service on the show's program.

Among the special features of the show will be "Lighting Magic," "The River," and other movies, the electric cow that breathes, moos, and gives milk, an electric workshop on wheels, an electric dairy and electric poultry devices. Morning, afternoon and evening programs have been arranged.

The schedule of the farm equipment show's six stops in Arkansas is as follows: September 30-October 1st at Green County at the Lakeside Consolidated school ground, 5 miles east of Paragould. October 3 and 4 at Cross County at Rolfe school ground, 6 1/2 miles northwest of Wynne. October 10 and 11 at Benton county, 4 miles south of Rogers on U. S. Highways 62 and 71. Japan to Support Germany
TOKYO —(AP)— A qualified informant said Thursday that it expected Japan would actively support Germany if the United States should enter the European war.

He said the Japanese government was finally convinced that the United States unalterably opposed Japan's "legitimate" expansion in the Orient.

The source said that "strengthening" an anti-communist pact with Germany, Italy and Japan had become one of the main objectives of Japanese diplomacy in the past year.

Meanwhile, he indicated, a non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia was not unlikely.
